

NEWS RELEASE

January 24, 2011

RE: ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, UK, INSTALLS NEW ALLEN ORGAN

Allen Organ Company is pleased to announce that the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst, England is the new home of a large Allen organ. Installed in the Royal Memorial Chapel, this 4-manual instrument was specially designed to meet the demanding musical needs of the Chapel. The diverse specification includes a unique Antiphonal String division. Attached is a copy of the instrument's specifications.

The organ is the culmination of a lengthy design and manufacturing process. The design team included Allen's Tonal Director, Randy Miller, Paul Arkwright of Allen Organs UK, and the Memorial Chapel's Director of Music Peter Beaven. Initial responses to the instrument have been fantastic. The organ will be featured in A Gala Concert performed by Carlo Curley on June 19, 2011.

While the organ was manufactured at Allen's factory in the United States, organ music transcends national borders. Allen Organ Company is honored to have been chosen to build the instrument for this world-renowned Chapel.

Following is a link to the Chapel's website with more details about the organ and the Chapel.

<http://www.christchurchsingers.org/>